My old Nokia N95 used to wake up for alarms even when the battery had✔ died.

Is there any current Android smartphone that can do this? ans =

Yes, you should buy a Nexus One or a Nexus S. If you buy another✔ phone like e.g. HTC Wildfire, you can't easily get the "vanilla"✔ Android.

I don't have any backups or whatever. My phone isn't rooted. It✔ updated to Gingerbread 2.3.3 OTA a couple of days ago, and I hate almost✔ every change that it introduced.

Thanks.

In the past, HTC phones have been the easiest to unlock, which↙ directly translates to their hackability and therefore support from↙ community developers.

Allegedly, newer HTC devices are a lot more restricted, which will↙ put a damper on custom ROM availability. I believe Samsung will soon↙ take the lead in the "most hackable" category, and we'll start seeing↙ more of their handsets on the CM's "supported" list. "I was told my a bestbuy guy, that apple headphones do not work with↙ android devices." thats not true you can video chat with someone on qik↙ or tango and it works fine plus i have a pair of sony and bose that also↙ dont work with it. and it has three rings at the input part of the↙ headphones. I also have the HTC Thunderbolt.

Android 2.1 - If I open my Gmail e-mails and I want to type then I↙ just can't turn off the keyboard sounds. How can I turn it off? (not the↙ notification, etc. all sounds, just the keyboard sounds.)

Is HTC Sensation 4G based on Android 2.2 or Android 2.3 OS?

ans =

It should be because google market thinks the apps are not supported by your device. You can go to Online Android Market and try installing the app that is not displayed. It should say that your device(Nook) is not supported for that app.

According to a Google Support forum post, clearing search history feature is added on Market 3.1: open the Market app, press Menu > Settings, and then touch "Clear search history."
